Notes from an Empty Nest

Dark field monotype, letterpress

297 x 420 mm

Tomorrow I might begin to dig the shallow earth in search of the bones of the woman I miss.

But today I am moving gently, taking solace in the cold sting of bird song and the love of my mother.

The patience of ordinary things.

I must really love you,

I wonder if you think about it often.

For what it is worth, I am always by your side.

There were days where you dreamt of living under endless blue skies.

Know that you can't take any of this with you, but it will all just carry on
